ANNITA DELANO, ARTIST AND PROFESSOR, DIES AT 84

Veteran Los Angeles painter Annita Delano, professor emeritus of art at UCLA, died recently at age 84. Born in California in 1894, she attended Los Angeles Normal School which later became UCLA and graduated in 1917. In 1918, she began as an art instructor and continued at UCLA more than 40 years. She retired in 1962 with the rank of full professor.

Active in local professional art organizations for more than 20 years, Delano served as president of the Art Teachers Assn. in 1946 and secretary of the California Watercolor Society. She was awarded a Barnes Foundation Scholarship for advanced studies in art. Her work was exhibited in numerous solo and group exhibitions throughout her career. She was one of "Nine Senior Southern California Painters" honored in the first exhibition presented by the Los Angeles Institute of Contemporary Art in 1974.
